[Oorrespondence of the Richmond Dispatch.] MORGANITELD, KY, March 13, 1876. I wrote you last from the Porkopolis of the West, from which point I moved upon Louisville, the metropolis of Kentucky, and got there is time to see the fag end of their Mardi-Gras, the principal feature of which was the old maids' mill, which is calculated to become decidedly popular with a large and unfortunate class of our population. It is a ponderous but ingenious piece of mechanism, in the hopper of which were placed, or rather unceremoniously thrus, a lot of ill-favored, scrawny old maids, which one after the other, were tramped in by the miller, for the mill did not seem to feed well. But after a few minutes of vigorous grinding a batch of as pretty, plump young rirle of sweet sixteen were turned out as you often see. Louisville owns the patent, I be lieve, but territory is for sale. Buy the soil privilege to work it in Richmond, and my dear Dispatch your fortune is made. Louisville is a very pretty city, claiming a population now of about 150,000. It is unusually well built, and laid off with regularity, the streets being very wide and beautifully graded. One of the finest buildings in the city is the Courier building, which is just being completed, fronting on both Fourth and Green streets, being on the cor-ners. It is built of sandstone, iron, and the fixest Baltimore brick, pre senting a most attractive exterior, while the internal arrangements are all that modern improvement could suggest. In completeness, convenience, and elegance it is thought there are few press buildings in the world which equal this, which is a noble monument to the enterprise and taste of the owner, Mr. W. N. Holdeman, the publisher of the Courier-Journal. From its lofty observa-tory one gets a splendid view of the city, the river, ard surrounding country, which will repay him for the labor of toiling up those long flights of steps which be encounters after leaving the elevator. The City Hall is also a large and imposing structure, in the rotunda of which stands a fine marble statue of Kentucky's distinguished son Henry Clay. But your correspondent had only twenty-feur bours for Louisville, and after business there was but little time left to "do" the city; so as the gas was lighting we took a regretful adieu of those fair precincis, and on board the steamer Fawn pushed through the foam and surge of those frightful-locking "falls" (where many a good boat has gone to pieces, and the light of many a life has gone our) down into smooth water and a dark and threatening night, with little prospects of making "dots" by the way. The boat being crowded it was not until after the midnight hour that I got the stew-ard to "put me in my little bed." Awaking the next morning one hundred miles below Louisville, we passed for sixty miles further through, or rather along, the borders of one of the richest tobacco regions in the world, Harcock and Daviess counties, of Kentucky. Strange to say, while such quantities of the weed are grown here on the Kentucky side

Spending a day in the busy little city of Owensboro', where three thriving banks are kept busy in bandling the currency, we push on down the raging Ohio, passing Evansville, Ind., the trade centre for this section, and a very enterprising, well-built city of :30,000 souls. From this place to Henderson, tweive miles below, the unusual spectacle of long trains of beavily-laden railroad cars running by water may be witnessed at all times of the night and day. This is the "transfer" of the St. Louis and S. E. railroad, in which road there is this break of twelve miles, the trains being conveyed on large barges and propelled by the railroad steamers back and forth between Evansville and Henderson, harled up the banks by heavy engines, and hurried forward to their destination without the delay of breaking bulk and reshipping. Henderson is another Kentucky tobacco

the Indiana side there is so little made that the soil as well as to the force of custom established during the existence of slavery,

one hundred and sixty miles from Louisville brought us to Owensboro', Ky., a considerable place, of some 8,000 or 10,000 inhabitants, immediately on the river, and largely engaged in the manufacture and trade cut is made in large quantities, and a great deal of tobacco stripped and prepared for the foreign trade. The factories were all apparently full to the extent of their capacity, and I learned that the crop bad generally exchanged hands, and already the planters had-unlike our Virginia tobacco growers-sold their crops. I suppose that in Virginia

there is not one fourth of the crop yet in town, about the size of Owensboro'-a pret tier and better built city—the seat of much wealth and refinement, and the home, among other notables, of Hon., John Young Brown the famous assailant of Beast Butler. His (Brown'e) shingle hung out over the door of an unpretentious little feeme law-office near our botel, and while asking some questions about the gentleman he passes us on the street, being on a short furlough; but he declines a recomination, being tired of public life and sacrificing thereby a large and lucrative practice. There are two competitors for his seat, Hop. Ignatius Spalding, of Morganfield, and Hon. James A. McKenzie, of Christian county. Spalding seems to have the inside track, and will probably represent this important distriction the next

Coming down the river fifty miles further we land again at Uniontown-still in the great tobacco region of Kentucky, which staple is the life of all this country, though the crop all through this section is this year seriously curtailed by the unprecedented overflow of the Obio last August, by which all the topacco as well as corn over an immense area of country was submerged and utterly ruined. Much distress and a depre-sing stagnation of business has been the result. But the people bear up bravely under their misfortunes, and are making every effort in their preparations for another crop to repair their Taxes are high here-very. In this county the poll-tax sione is six or seven dollars, while in Posey county, across the river in Indiana, it is five per cent., and they don't grumble any more than we do in Virginia. What would our tax grumblers say to 250 on every $1,000 worth of property. Let them read and be consoled. There are people even in the favored "West" worse tax-ple even in the favored ridden than we.

A fast Kentucky trotter brought the writer out six miles from Uniontown to this place, the county-seat of Union, one of the largest and wealthiest counties of the State. Morganfield boasts of one of the finest courties in the State. I have never seen a freights received daily in Philadelphia and Richmond. For further information apply to L. B. From the outlook on the cupols I have to-day had a view of as pretty and fertile a region as it has often been my fortune to behold—the soli, a dark alluvial, yielding in tobacco and corn a rich return for the toll of the husbandman. The most fertile localities are us mistakably designated by the spoutaneous the season is propitious, is exported in large quantities to less favored regions. I was surprised to find that the trees grow generally quite large, yielding saveral that the general trees are surprised to find that the trees grow generally quite large, yielding saveral trees are surprised to find that the trees grow generally quite large, yielding saveral trees are surprised to find that the trees grow generally quite large, yielding saveral trees are surprised to find that the trees grow generally quite large, yielding saverally trees are surprised to find that the trees grow generally quite large, yielding saverally trees are surprised to find that the trees grow generally quite large. rally quite large, yielding several bushels to pressly for this route.

I find here several Virginians, who are prosperous and content in this State of their adoption. Among whom are Professor Robert Carrington, formerly of Sylvan Hill.

Virginia may well be called the mother of Kentucky. It seems as if every other person one meets here either bails directly from Virgints or will tell you that his father or graudfather was a Virginian, and they are by ne means ashamed to laim the descent, failed though the old State be. I must now draw this communication to s close; will in a few days bend my course towards the Mississippi and around Padacab or Cairo, may have an opportunity to gather some news items for you. The whole country is intensely excited over those scandalous revelations being matie in Washington. Especially is this the case in Louisville, where Mrs. Belknap is well known, and where one of her sisters live. Some sympathy, born of inherent American gallantry alone, is expressed for Mrs. Belknap, but the unfortunate ex-Secretary gets little else but the bitterest recrimination; and the impression is general that we have only heard the begining of the end, which will involve the whole Administration. While there is some satisfaction expressed, no right-feeling person can rejoice at the disgraceful and aumiliating "situation,"

BOTETOURT. Cardinal Manning in a recent sermon relerred to English pauperism in the following pointed language : "England, the richest of all countries, has upon it a stain and a shame not to be found in countries which English men assume to despise. He meant pauperism, an intense demoralized state of poverty. Poverty in itself was an honorable state; but panperism was something altogether distinet from poverty. P uperism was that wrecked condition of men and of families out of which there was no rising by any effort of their own. And what did it come from? It would take too long to endeavor to say. One reason he would state : the overwhelming prosperity of the rich, the closeness of the hands and the hearts, and the ignorance in which the rich lived and died of the state of the poor who lived and dicd round about their dwellings. The possesion of wealth and prosperity generated a elfishness and an unconsciousness of the sufferings of others, so that men were wrapped up in their own daily indulgence, and were forgetful of those who were in want."

The Rose Michel of the Union Square Theatre-Miss Eytinge (Mrs. Butler)-bas a little son of remarkable cleverness, who has not until the other day been permitted to visit the theatre. He sat intent through the first act of the play, but when the scene came in which Pierne Michel and his wife have their exciting controversy, Frank's eyes filled, and he leaned forward and shouted lustily with his small voice, "I don't want that man to speak so to my mamma." The bouse-it was a ladies' one, being matinee,-came down at this unexpected protest, and Rose Michel herself, overcome by the situation, "stuck dead," and took immediate action toward baving the young gentleman taken around to the green-room.

The man who has one? learned what a very small part be plays in the world, and how few people watch him as he plays it, is likely to be a more genuine, earnest fellow there after. The conviction of our own insignifi cance is a profitable seasoning to every meal-a fact to take with us to office, street, or church, or to meditate upon on our pilit is not considered a staple. This is in great low.

BEAUTIFUL TRACT OF ONE HUNDRED AND TEN AND NINE.

NTHS ACRES OF LAND, ON THE THREEHOPPED ROAD, ABOUT FOUR AND A HALF LES WEST OF THE CITY OF RICHMOND.

AUCTION.—ON WEDNE DAY, 22d of March. atter the sale of lands for Messrs. Boulware and Leake, commissioners, advertised in this papers sy at 1 o'clock P. M.—we will sell, upon the nremises, the TRAOT OF LAND formerly owned by Mr. Thomas Dicken, lying on the east side of the Three-Chopped road, about half a mile beyond the Three-Chopped road, about half a mile beyond the Forks, and between the lands of Mr. William Rutherford and Mrs. B. W. Green, fronting on said road and running back towards the city.

There are ONE HUNDRED AND TEN AND NINE-TENTHS ACAFS, rearly square in shape; about one half cleared, the remainder in undergrowth, with some wood; two spring branches running through it, easily drained; lying beautifully, and suscertible of being made one of the most valuable farms near the city, as the soil is naturally very superior, and has been somewhat improved.

The contemplated extension of Grove avesue will pass through this land, having nearly equal quantities on either side. To those wishing to establish a home near the city this property offers the inducements of a healthful situation, fine soil, and a good neighborhood, whilst to those merely seeking an investment, the fact that it is located directly in the line of the westward march of the city renders its steady increase in value as sure as the future growth of the city.

Decree of Pt homond Chancery Court-entered 22d February, 1876.—In execution of said decree the undersigned, special commissioners thereby appointed, will sell by auction on WEDNESDAY, 22d March, 1876, in the order named below, upon the premises respectively, commencing at 12 o'clock M., the following-described THREE TRACTS OF LAND, lying in Heorico county on the south side of the Three-Chopped road, and just beyond the residence of the late B. W. Green—to will.

beyond the residence of the late B. W. Green—to will:

First. The FARM whereon the late Robert Courtney fermerly resided, with a DW & LLING and other buildings thereon, lying well—the greater part of it improved, but with a sufficient quantity of wood. This tract combins 'NB. HUNDED'D AND NINETY-SEVEN AND ONE FUIRTHA CRES. Second. A TRACT of FORTY-ONE AND THREE QUARTIFR ACRES adjoining the above. Third, the TRACT called "Jeffries," adjusting on the east the Courtney tract, also the lands of Mrs. Susan Patterson and Mr. Wigand, and containing LIGHTY-FIVE. AND TWO THIRDS ACRES, with some improvements thereon.

These lands lie in the line of the future growth of the western ruburbs of the city; and being of good soil, could be made valuable farms. Persons seeking such properly should attend the sale, as bargains may doubtless be obtained, and upon very favorable terms of sale.

TERMS: Cash to pay costs of sultand of sale; the residue at one, two, and three years for bonds with security, bearing interest payable semi-annually; or, if preferred by the parchasers, one third cash; balance at one, two, and three years for bonds without security, hearing interest payable semi-annually, in either case the titles will be retained by the court until the whole purchase-money shall be paid.
